AUTHOR VISIT

To celebrate World Book Day, we were delighted to welcome Dr Anjana Khatwa to the LRC to explain how she wrote her critically acclaimed book 'The Whispers of Rock'.

Students from all year groups came along to find out more about Anjana's motivation to write this book and how her passion for geology and earth science shaped the fascinating book that she has written.

'The Whispers of Rock' is unique in blending Anjana's academic knowledge with the beliefs and stories of First Nation people and indigenous groups from across the globe and she seeks to actively promote how these differing views can exist harmoniously.

Students enjoyed a candid Q&A session with Anjana asking how much she got paid for writing the book, if she had any regrets and what she might be writing next. It was an inspiring session for creative writers and geographers alike.

Mrs Lynch, LRC Manager said 'Thank you to Anjana for giving up her time and for being so inspirational to our students. This session perfectly summed up the passion that we feel for promoting reading and accessing a diversity of texts at Corfe Hills School'.
